STROKE

Manual handling

A very valid question was asked last week during a training session.....

Q. What can you (the trainer) do to ensure I (the course member) change the habits of manual handling that can cause the injuries?

A. I went through the raising of consciousness of possible injuries/ the right techniques to utilize/ the newsletters/ posters/ possible implementation of back care teams for continual monitoring etc...

What I should have said was that I should just wait...
... continue the bad lifting habits and when the injuries come you will stop twisting, you will pick things up right, you will pull/ push as we advocate because your body will naturally adopt the posture that causes least strain and so least pain... think about it.

The Stroke Association has held a massive campaign over recent months to raise awareness of the size of the problem in the UK and the dramatic effect FAST recognition leading to effective medical treatment can have in terms of recovery. Prompt action can prevent further damage to the brain and help someone make a full recovery. Delay can result in death or major long-term disabilities, such as paralysis, severe memory loss and communication problems. I make no apologies for duplicating small sections of their website if it helps someone recognize a stroke early and enable that early care to help them and their families.

What if the symptoms go away?

A mini stroke (or Transient Ischaemic Attack) is similar to a full stroke but the symptoms may only last a couple of minutes and will have totally gone within 24hrs. Don't ignore it – it could lead to a major stroke. See your GP as soon as possible and ask to be referred to a specialist stroke service. This should happen within 7 days.

What is FAST?

Fast requires an assessment of 3 specific symptoms of stroke.

Facial weakness – can the person smile? Has their mouth or eye dropped?

Arm weakness – can the person raise both arms?

Speech problems – can the person speak clearly and understand what you say?
